PRINCIPAL'S MESSAGE

It is a pleasure for me as Principal of Westview Centennial Secondary School to extend to the editors of this, our first yearbook, the congratulations of the entire school for the success of their efforts. As a result of the efforts of these dedicated students, all of us now possess a book on whose pages are recorded the history of our first two years at Westview. As our memory begins to fade with the passage of time, it will be with nostalgia that we turn to this book to relive in our minds many of today 's events.

This year we especially honour the students who will be leaving Westview as our first grade 13 graduating class. To this group may I express my gratitude for a job well done. You have been charged with accepting the role of leadership in a new and young school, and your accomplishments in this regard have been outstanding and will long be remembered. The excellent programs and activities you have started will, in time, become tradition at this school. We also look forward to next year when we can add graduates of our Four Year Science, Technology and Trades Course to the initial list of Westview alumnae.

Man can this day rocket his kind into space and orbit the moon. He can build machines with powers almost beyond our comprehension, and we are now told that he can create life itself within the confines of a laboratory. And yet, in spite of these tremendous scientific and technological advancements taking place each minute of the day, man has still not learned how to get along with his fellow man. Surely, this is the challenge facing each of us today, for it has been said that perhaps the people who soon may bring down on themselves a holocaust are - or will have been - the most educated of all time.

It is an established fact that with each passing year our facilities, our equipment, our methods will change to accommodate the latest trends in education. Along with these changes however, it is imperative that we invest more of our time and effort in an attempt to determine what type of environment is essential, so that a student can develop the characteristics necessary to accept his fellow man - without fear, hate, distrust or prejudice. This will involve more than just paying lip service to the phrase "respect for the rights of others".

If we at Westview could establish this environment at our level - what a bright hope for the future!

May this first copy of the Westview yearbook be your record of a successful and happy year.

W. R. Mc Cutcheon

VICE PRINCIPAL'S MESSAGES

I am indeed grateful for an opportunity to present a brief message for publication in Westview's First Yearbook. I feel that my message must be one of congratulations!

First, may I congratulate your Editor for his hard work and excellent leadership, and the entire staff of the Yearbook for the excellent publication that they have produced. They may be justifiably proud as they view the product of their time and efforts.

Second, congratulations to the many students who have fostered a spirit of cooperation at Westview. This Yearbook is a record of the varied activities, projects, and achievements that have marked the past year. As you peruse these pages you will see students at study, at play, in keen competition, in positions of leadership, and in roles of service. They have given a SPIRIT to Westview and helped to make it a proud school!

And finally, to all students who have successfully completed their chosen courses and who now become the vanguard of Westview's Graduates - congratulations! Their experience here is one step in a process of education which will continue throughout their lives. May their stay here prepare them to build a better future for themselves! And may it, perhaps prepare them to serve others less fortunate than themselves.

H.J. Brewer

In this, the first issue of our school vearbook, it is a rare privilege for me to comment in the form of a vice-principal's message. May I begin by congratulating the editorial staff for this achievement. The pressure and demands are always greatest on those who "walk the ground" for the first time. Certainly, the efforts of all involved will give each of us ample opportunity for sentimental reflection at some future time.

Already, in the short span of two years, certain traditions of excellence in study and achievement have been enablished at Westview. And yet, in what will certainly be a long and fructul history of the school, we have merely scratched the surface. Nevertheless, the standards set thus far should serve as a goal which we must strive to maintain or surpass. Certainly, future students will owe much to the character of the students of the pioneer years because of the type of school they have moulded.

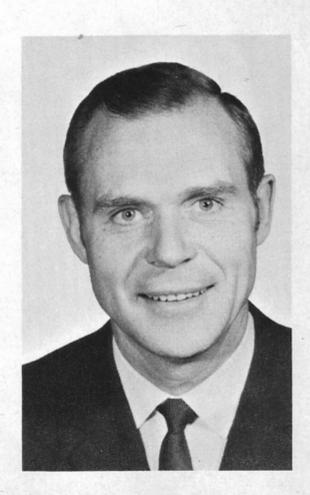

By name and by design ours is a distinctive place of learning. It would seem to follow then, that there is thrust upon us a measure of responsibility that is no less distinctive, and I suggest that only through total commitment and total involvement in all facets of school life can these responsibilities be carried to fulfilment. There can be no question that:

"To whom much is given, Of him shall much be required."

To the graduating classes I extend a wish for a future that is both challenging and staisfying wherever your path may lead.

To all members of the current year I urge you to set your sights high, for in reality, if you subject yourself to the stern discipline of maximum self-effort, there is no goal within the realm of possibility that you cannot attain.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

This year has probably been the most unusual year of my life. I would like to thank you, the students of Westview for giving it to me.

This has been a successful year for Westview and I would like to take this opportunity to recap two of these successes.

We all remember our smash United Appeal Drive. This drive came under the capable direction of Laird Thurston and Tony Rose. We, the student's of Westview, managed to raise $1300. Our estimated goal was $1100 dollars. This was the first demonstration of the tremendous spirit of the Westview student body.

The second demonstration came with "Operation Mud Lake." This project, run by Chris Bart and his Hospital and Community Service Committee netted five hundred dollars for a small town in Labrador. Without this money, the town would have faced a bleak and barren Christmas.

I do a lot of shouting about the spirit of Westview and I think I had better define what I mean by spirit. Spirit is standing out in the rain to cheer on a mud soaked football team. Spirit is raising the roof of the gym when the fossils go down to one of their many defeats during a student-teacher broom ball game. Spirit is giving your lunch money to a good cause so that Westview, as a whole, will be remembered by all those who receive from us. But Spirit, above all, is the ability of the entire student body to function as a whole, so that each individual student will feel a pride in his school. Spirit is the ability of each and every student to say "I'm from Westview and I'm proud of it!" and really mean it. In my opinion, the students of Westview have this Spirit. Without it, we could never have functioned as well as we have.

I feel that here, I must express personal thanks to three people who have been invaluable to me this year. The first, of course, is Barry Richardson, the grade 13 rep.. As Chairman of the Yearbook Advertising and Sales Committee, Barry is responsible for raising the money for the book you are now reading. As my personal right hand man he has been magnificent.

The second person I personally wish to thank is Laird Thurston. His help with almost every problem I have faced, his work on this yearbook, his service on the United Appeal Commmittee and many, many other things have been truly invaluable to my administration.

The third person I personally wish to thank is Chris Bart. He of course, is responsible for the success of "Operation Mud Lake". He has also backed the council in every emergency and has proved to be an invaluable source of good counsel to me.

Next year a new president will take my place. When it comes to write a message like this, he will look back on his term of office and he will remember each headache, and each moment of elation, just as I am doing. I guarantee you, if he had it all to do over again, he would do it gladly. I know I would.

THE GREEN FIELD OF TIME

The green field in which they buried him
Did not shed a tear as they lowered his remains
In the strong pine box that the village smith built
The village smith built; built with strong arms
Arms that could strangle a man and at one time did
But that is as dead as him to be buried.

The green field in which they buried him
Did not feel a pang of remorse as they lowered his remains
In the hole dug by the gardiner; by the gardiner
Who one night in a drunken rage burned a barn
And wiped out a man who needed the barn
But that is as dead as him to be buried.

The green field in which they buried him
Did not know any sorrow as they lowered his remains
In the service conducted by the minister
Who blasphemed a girl and burned her at the stake.
But now tells people to repent against their sins
But that is as dead as the justice that they buried.

Rob Taylor

BUT I DID LIKE HIM.

Dougie's

life

was little more than living for the day.

He just stayed home, eating, sleeping and ng, sleeping and stuff like these.

His real pleasure seemed to be walking and looking and thinking and things as them.

For two years Dougie stayed there. Same things did my buddy Dougie Every day. All his friends did it

TOO

Yesterday good old Dougie moved, Boy! how happy was fat Dougie.

Oh boy, "Great eh Dougie?" Even though my buddy Dougie was a real pig, it was . . . SAD.

I think I had him for breakfast. BOO, HOO.

MONKEYDOM

Three monkeys sat on a coconut tree Discussing things as they're said to be Said one to the others--"Now listen you two, There 's a certain humour that can't be true That man descended from our noble race--The very idea is sure a disgrace, No monkey ever deserted his wife, Starved her babies and ruined her life; And you've never known another monk To leave her babies with others to bunk, Or pass them on from one to another Till they hardly know which one is their mother, And another thing you will never see--A monk build a fence around a coconut tree And let the coconuts go to waste, Forbidding all other monks a taste. Why, if I put a fence around this tree Starvation would force you to steal from me, And here's something else a monk won't do Go out at night and get on a "stew", Or use a gun or a club or knife To take some other poor monkey's life Yes, man descended—the ornary cuss— But, brother, He didn't descend from us!"

REBECCA GOLD 10F

Isn't it strange that princes and kings And clowns that caper in sawdust rings And ordinary folks like you and me Are builders of eternity.

To each is given a bag of tools, An hour glass and a book of rules, And each must build ere his time is flown. A stumbling block, or a stepping stone.

Peter Rea 12D

COPY U DENOMINATION

As we stand in the cafetoruim watching it writhing and twisting in its hidden agony, how many of us see its subsurface ugliness and its plastic body? We stare at it, hard; yet its endemic obscurity pleases many as it vomits words into our ears. That ugly creature lying there in the cafetorium--barraging us with chattering truths. "Social", it shouts, "social"... as it spews up its ringing words into our eyes and noses; over our hands and feet; within our very substance--we can't escape from it, unless... no never, it would always attack and torment us, pitiful and false though it is; but why do we make it so? Why do we use such false tools to build such a creature--what else is to be expected? How do we expect our creature to behave if we, ourselves are less than humane. Our creature is us and if we can't stand it we can always change it ... or oursleves? But we are too damn scared of ourselves. Scared of what we'll say or do to ourselves if we try to change. Ostracism is the penalty.

"Yes", it cries, "Yes. We know that X likes Y. We know that X adheres to Y. But we don't. We don't like Y. We don't adhere to Y. It's what we think that counts--not what X thinks. We are collective. X is individual and must conform to us and ostracize Y from its friendship..."

conform to us and ostracize Y from its friendship "

Of course we know that X will ostracize Y because X is spineless and weak. A copyu following its fellows into oblivion. We listen to the creature as it tells us what we suspect, ". . . . oh yes. X leaves. X knows that Y isn't persona or res grata—to anyone except itself X. But we the collective are too great for X which must conform—or spend time in the ostracism prison."

The creature is right—its painful eyes turn to us for help. They plead, "Help X, help X." Only we can do it. But we don't because we are made of plastic jelly and we are wet; and X knows it's better to have many acquaintances than one friend. So we must weep our oxygen tears for X, for X must leave Y; and we must weep tears for ourselves."

And the creature continues; It's in pain--terrible pain-but only its eyes show the misery because its face shows a smile. You have to look deeply to see the sadness, the sorrow. ". . . and you," it points its thick collective finger towards a figure in the shadows, "yesterday you were smiling with "you know who"--and so were we. But not today. We aren't smiling today so neither are you. You don't really know why but you accept it--weak and gutless creature you are. Anything to protect you from the temporary death row of isolationism. Even now you are falling down under the battery of my truths. Your knees are sagging below your feet and into the floor "

Alvin Anson 13A

Pity this, fallen and broken, scarred, cracked and shattered. Unknown to our world, Yet noisy and outspoken. Once in time we hear of you, Seen though, you are not. And even if you can not sense, You are what we have sought. Utilize our world-wide cause, Understanding less and least, and fearing not the sacred beast. But is it possible to survive a life scattered with grief and strewn with strife. Pity this if you will, and show no fear of those who kill.

THE LAST TIME I SAW DARCEY

Her waist-length, brown hair, was unkept and dirty. The cheek-long bangs were parted in the middle of her forehead and pushed to each side of her small oval face, which appeared darkly tanned. Her large, luminous eyes narrowed excitedly and her dark, blue pupils sparkled as the sun's rays hit them when they finally opened. Across the ridge of her short, gently sloped nose, ran a narrow rim of light coloured freckles, small, numerous dots that nature had seemingly sprinkled in the right place, for they were hardly noticeable. Her pale, frosted lips murmured a quiet whisper of surprise and her mouth opened into a quick, understanding smile.

Then, twisting her brown head in his direction, her complete expression changed, her mouth lit up in a small, quaint smile. Her eyes, sparkling with life seemed to glow straight through him. Jumping up gracefully, she gave him a long gurgling laugh and ran down the dusty road, leaving an air of wonderment behind her. Now Darcey's dead.

Karin O'Brien

HE COULD HAVE BEEN A SAVIOUR

He was stung by society, yesterday. For you know they aren't all good, When disillusioned what's to say? Just pack it up and go your way.

But he was society's conscience, it shows A need felt he to pay their evil's price So he journeyed to the healing snows. A great man he but no one knows his deed.

He rose to the heights of the mountain top
To die upon his wooden cross,
And as he hung, before he dropped
He thought, But why?, it's not my job
To pay for evil I've not rendered
To die without being written up in praise
To wake up finding life has ended,
All because I've surrendered (to conscience.)

His life was simple--conscience vs. physical want. And as he died he decisionized his plight And jumped from the cross--and ran down the mountain To save the world and not to die without a fight.

But on the way down he tripped and cracked his skull open.

Tony Kerins 11A

GOD

He sits on his throne up above And looks down on this troubled world And he heaves a silent sigh That is echoed from a slent sky.

He sees the wickedness, the death, human frailty, and man's uncertainty.

He sees the nations of the world crumbling in its own existence.

And he heaves a silent sigh

That is echoed from a silent sky.

And he sees man's insatiable lust for power
Held within the crumbling towers.
He sees that his laws are forgotten
And in its wake he sees man reduced to roaming savages.

And he sees man panick amongst the shroud of death And he sees the world before his eyes And then it is gone, the world I mean And he heaves a silent sigh That is echoed from a silent sky.

And he looks around him once again
As he did in the beginning
And he passes his hand over the empty space
And starts his new creation once again
And he realizes his mistake and the Burden he has carried all this time is gone.

THE TOY

The defendant rose and gravely bowed his head His eyes, black and expressionless, were fixed on the jury by the bed.

With the motions of a drunkard he pleaded his case
The court shook with laughter, contempt written on every face.

The prosecution scrambled to the witness stand
With the experience of years he held the defendant in a chubby hand.

A jerk
A gasp
The jury let the verdict of the court be known
"We find you guilty on the basis of the performance shown."

The puppet met the sentence with a shake of golden locks. He spent his life of exile in the judge's dark toy box.

EDITOR'S MESSAGE

The Park Bench is a new type of school magazine. The yearbook staff has organized the sections to try to be different but practical. The cover with Westview's initials and a park bench was designed by Angelo Maletta; with the end sheets art work by Graham Porter.

I would like to thank Marg Dick in particular for her outstanding work on the Park Bench. Marg helped with the candids, classes, and advertising as well as working on the activities section. It was this devotion that gave the Park Bench that woman's touch.

The candids and general photographs throughout the Park Bench were mainly the work of Peter Williams. Peter organized the developing and printing when the going was rough and time was at a minimum.

Barry Richardson and his advertising committee deserve hearty congratulations for obtaining the advertising so vitally needed for a year-book.

It was the devotion of these people as well as a number of others that made the Park Bench.

It is our hope that the Park Bench will hold many memories of the year's 1968-69.

Murston

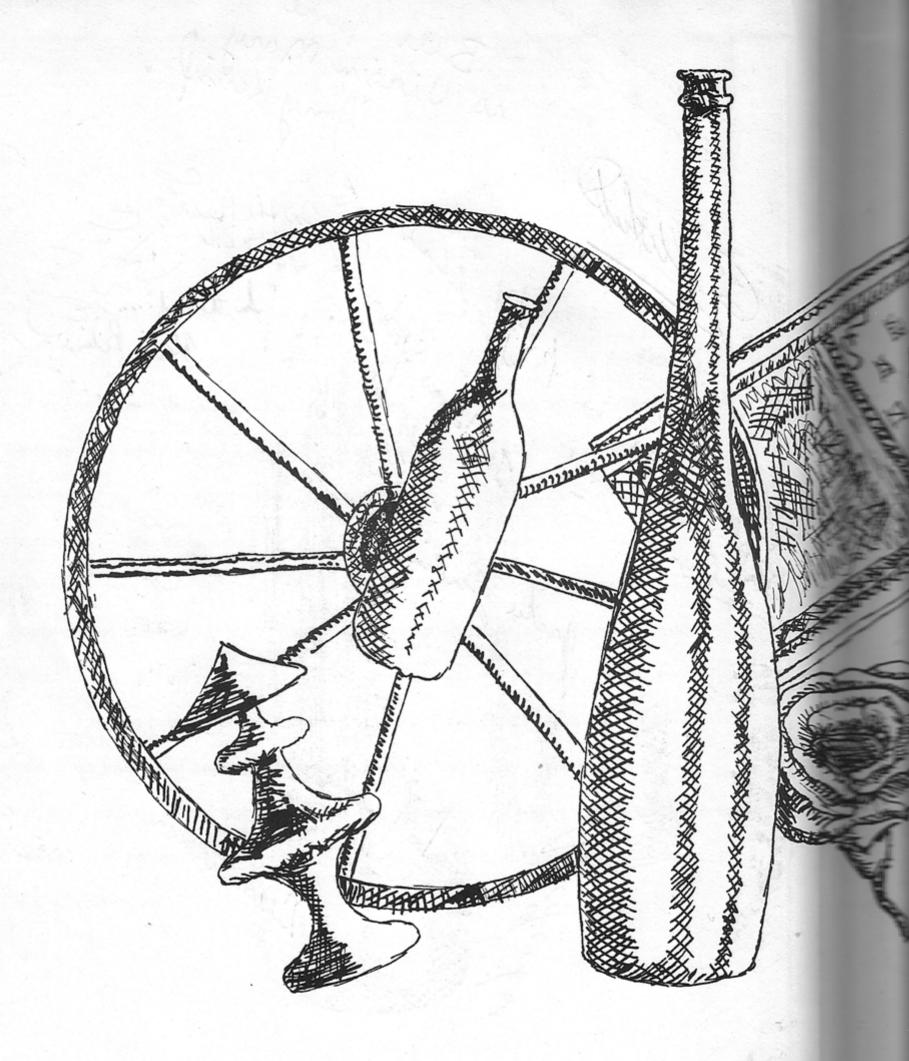

THE CHAIRMAN'S MESSAGE

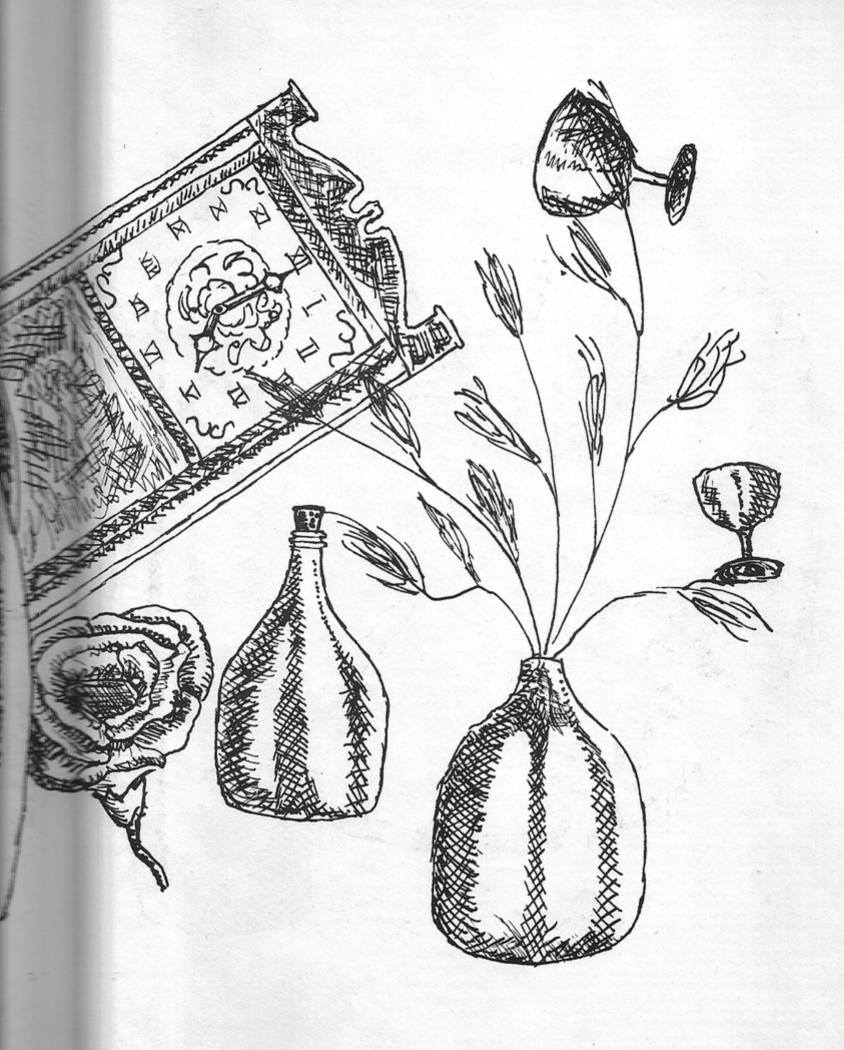

In North York we are ever mindful of the underlying aim of education—the continual search for truth, and in this regard endeavour to provide the best professional talent and material which will keep us in the forefront of societal change.
We have entered an era of individual development where student-centred programs and learning by discovery methods have replaced the traditional teacher-oriented classrooms. In our defence of the dignity, integrity and freedom of the individual we hope to develop an appreciation of humanity in our students. Wisdom and understanding can add to man's freedom and power but sensitivity, compassion and responsibility, as well as personal integrity and honesty are necessary for his maturity.

In taking pride in the scholastic, athletic and cultural achievements of students we know that each has given according to his ability. We hope that you have enjoyed your school community and that acceptance of responsibility has been a rewarding experience which will stand you in good stead as you progress in broader fields of endeavour.

Bruce Bone
